Are Listed

Approval of three more Salem CWA projects, among them the construction of a hose tower and garage and other improvements at the city hall and the extension of water mains on North Ellsworth ave, was announced today by the Ohio Civil Works Administration at Columbus.

The three Salem jobs, among 12 new Columbian county projects approved by the state, are estimated at a total of $10,576 and will provide work for 51 men for a total of 82 days.

Other county projects approved included three in East Liverpool, two in Wellsville and East Palestine, one county job and one in Salineville.

The state also placed its stamp of approval on 16 Mahoning county projects, the bulk of which are proposed in Youngstown but which also include jobs in Canfield and Sebring.

$2,385 At City Hall

General repairs at the city hall, including a new hose tower which may also house the old bell used to toll fire alarms and the hour, the construction of a new garage and a cell for women prisoners are estimated at a cost of $2,385. Nine men will be used on the job for 30 days.

The North Ellsworth water main extension project calls for the laying of more than 4,000 feet of pipe north on the thoroughfare to provide fire protection and a supply of city water to residents of areas annexed by the municipality two years ago. The project is estimated to cost $7,575 and is to give jobs to 33 men for 40 days.

The other newly approved Salem project is a public school venture providing for the re-pointing of masonry at Columbia and McKinley buildings at an estimated cost of $615, using nine men for 12 days.

City council as yet has made no appropriation of funds for the purchase of equipment to be used on the city hall and North Ellsworth projects and until such appropriations are made it will be impossible to start work on them, local CWA officials said today.

Work, however, is being continued on other projects with more than 100 men busy within the city and an almost equal number of Salem men provided jobs on county projects.

Other Projects Listed

Other county projects, and those in Canfield and Sebring, approved by the state, follow:

Canfield, grading, draining and paving Scott, Cross, High, Kirk and Oak streets, $5,225 for 37 men, 35 days.

Sebring and Smith township, improve streets, alleys and ditches, $2,457 for 26 men, 30 days.

Wellsville, repairing Broadway between Third and Fifth; Clark between 15th and 18th, and Broadway

Desperado

(By Associated Press)

MARIETTA, O. Jan. 8—A "shoot to kill" order was broadcast to police officers of four states today as they continued a widespread search for Neal Bowman, escaped desperado.

The former terrorist of southwestern Ohio left a trail of two kidnappings and two automobile robberies as he fled with a companion diagonally across southeastern Ohio Sunday.

They kidnapped the Vinton county sheriff, H. L. Partee of McArthur, forced the official to drive them across two counties, and then stole his car.

Steal Another Auto

At Cambridge, they abandoned Partee's auto, thrust a revolver into the ribs of Harold Hutchinson, 25, forced him to ride on the running board for several blocks before they commanded him to "beat it." Bowman and his companion took $12 and a wrist watch from Hutchinson, besides the automobile.

The two kidnappers brought a hurriedly called conference of Southern Ohio hill county law enforcement agencies. From that conference came the "shoot to kill" order. It was flashed to West Virginia state police and authorities of Northeastern Kentucky and Western Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Hobart showed no concern when arrested Saturday by government agents.

The brother to whom Mrs. Hobart is accused of sending the candy is Harrington Fitzgerald, Jr., 34, a patient in the veterans' hospital at Coatsville, Pa. He was wounded and gassed during the World war.

Guards were stationed along the Ohio river in an attempt to prevent the two desperate criminals from escaping. Sheriff Gay Thorn of Washington county said he believed Bowman and his partner would not be able to cross.

Companion Keeps Silence

As the hunt for the pair was intensified, authorities admitted themselves baffled by the identity of Bowman's companion. Sheriff Partee, unharmed by his experience, said Bowman readily confessed his identity but that his companion remained silent. Partee was released about five miles beyond Logan. He had escorted the men for 40 miles.

The two kidnappers Sunday brought to three those attributed to Bowman since he escaped from the Lima State Hospital for the Insane on Christmas day. He brandished a revolver and threw a fire hose over the wall to effect his release.

Just a week ago, Bowman kidnapped M. L. Walters, a merchant policeman of Circleville. As yesterday, he was charged with stealing two automobiles on his first kidnapping excursion.

Mr. Hobart has refused to comment on the case.

A short, sturdy woman whose brown hair shows streaks of gray, Mrs. Hobart was not moved by the arrest. Nor has she since shown emotion, say jail attendants.

LISBON, Jan. 8—Rev. J. Morgan Cox, until recently pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, Wheeling, W. Va., assumed the pastorate of the Presbyterian church here Sunday morning. Mr. Cox and his family located in the West Lincoln way parsonage last week. He succeeds Rev. Jarvis M. Cotton, who resigned the pastorate of the Presbyterian church here to accept the pastorate of a Pittsburgh church.

Mr. Cox is a native of Parkersburg, W. Va., and a graduate of Western Theological Seminary, Pittsburgh, Pa., May 1923. His first charge was the Amity Presbyterian church, Dravosburg, Pa., from where he went to the Herron Hill Presbyterian church, Pittsburgh, and then to the third Presbyterian church, Wheeling.

The theater was nearly filled, and there was a scramble for the exits. Police reserves arrived in time to make a dozen arrests.

Plan Improvement
Of Wellsville Rd.

LISBON, Jan. 8—Improvement of the former route of the Wellsville-Salineville road from the north corporation line to the intersection of State Route 39 has been determined upon by the state highway department, following a survey of this road recently completed by David M. Cooper, formerly attached to the office of the county surveyor here, now with the state highway department.

The type of improvement has not been announced, although county commissioners have been informed that this road is one of the first to be given attention by the highway department under the new 1934 improvement program.

CINCINNATI, O. Jan. 8—The next time Gene Blaze, constable at Higginsport, Brown county, leaves his bailiwick, he won't forget his credentials.

Blaze, who has had his job only a week, was passing through nearby Harrison in search of a robbery suspect when his automobile broke down.

The wife of a garage owner spied his pistol and summoned deputy sheriffs. Blaze and a companion, James Beyerslofer, also of Higginsport, sat in the county jail here until deputies telephoned the sheriff of Brown county and satisfied themselves that Blaze was a bona-fide officer.

Chicago Milk Delivery Halted As Violence Flares

Farmers who daily send approximately 4,000,000 pounds of milk into Chicago began their long threatened strike Saturday morning. The picture shows farm pickets stopping a car on a Wisconsin road, near the Illinois line, to ascertain whether it contains milk.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Jan. 8—Milk deliveries were halted in Chicago today as violence flared over a 100-mile area in a dairymen's strike against reduced prices.

Dumping of milk spread from highways surrounding Chicago and reached into the city itself. Independent retail dealers who attempted to deliver milk had their trucks tipped over and the contents spilled into sewers.

The most serious report of violence came from Wisconsin, where interference with railroad trains hauling milk was reported.

Attempts were made at Lyons and Sturtevant, Wis., to dump 40,000 pounds of milk from a refrigerator car. Trainmen told of hearing a shot fired Saturday night in Kenosha, Wis.

Hundreds of thousands of gallons of milk were dumped on the highways. The blockade nearly 100 percent.

Firemen responded to 163 alarms during the year, Malloy reported, travelling 149.4 miles. They used 861 gallons of chemicals and extended 6,200 ft. of hose in fighting the various blazes.

Buildings endangered by flames during the year were valued at $263,730 while loss on buildings amounted to only $6,825. Contents endangered were valued at $80,162, and the loss was $2,465.43.

The value of property, buildings and contents endangered was placed at $43,822.

Five of the runs made by firemen were outside of the city limits. The largest fire during the year was that which caused damage estimated at more than $4,000 to the Cooper greenhouse, North Ellsworth ave.

Part of the greenhouse is located inside and the rest outside of the city limits but the entire amount of the loss is listed in his figures to the state. Excluding the greenhouse blaze from the statistics the per capita loss for the city would be less than 50 cents, the smallest in history.

Buildings endangered by flames during the year were valued at $263,730 while loss on buildings amounted to only $6,825. Contents endangered were valued at $80,162, and the loss was $2,465.43.

The value of property, buildings and contents endangered was placed at $43,822.

The burglary occurred between 6:30 and 10:30 p. m. Saturday while Dr. and Mrs. Atchison and their mother, Mrs. Helen Roach, were visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Atchison in Salem.

Dr. Atchison and his wife returned at 10:30 to discover their home in its disordered condition.

The value of goods taken by the burglars has not been fixed by Dr. Atchison. Among the loot were a sweater, jewelry, pipes and cigar cases, a revolver, field glasses, cosmetics and men's clothing.

Sheriff Frank Ballantine is investigating.

A LEADER

It comes about frequently that outstanding men, by increasing the scope of their interests so widely, cease to be identified with any particular city. Thus, until Herbert Hoover retired to Palo Alto, it was easy to forget that he thought of one community as his home. There are many similar examples.

Andrew Squire, who died at the close of last week at the age of 83, was an example of another type of citizen—a man who spent his life identified closely with one community, yet a man whose name was honored in many distant places. Cleveland, which he had seen grow from an over-sized village to one of the nation's great cities, regarded him as an institution in its civic and professional life.

It was his good fortune to begin his profession of law in the era of corporation growth. Time has proved that it was the good fortune of his clients to have had at their service a legal mind that quickly showed extraordinary grasp of their problems. The circumstances were mutually profitable, and Mr. Squire's prestige grew steadily. Fortified by character, it elevated him to a high place. He was content to let such things take their natural course, without his personal direction, which probably is why his Cleveland neighbors are mourning so sincerely the passing of a lovable man, who happened, also to have been a very successful one.

OFF TO HONOLULU

Sometime next Friday residents of San Francisco will crane their necks for a glimpse of six navy seaplanes that will help make history, if they can travel 2,100 miles without accident. In the planes will be some of Uncle Sam's brightest and most capable young men, eager to share in the glory of the first mass formation flight from the United States to the Hawaiian islands.

If the flight is successful, it will be hailed as the further proof of the airplane's value in war. The Territory of Hawaii is one of the defense problems of the United States navy. A demonstration that it is practical to fly from the mainland to the outpost will be as significant in this day as previous demonstrations that ships could cover the same distance safely.

Before further significance is read into the story of the flight, it is well to consult a map. Seven out of 10 Americans are inclined to locate the Hawaiian islands too far to the west, well on the other side of the international divisional line for time. In terms of miles, they are approximately 100 units this side of that line. If one is thinking of their position in relation to Japan, they are just a little more than a third of the way across the Pacific ocean from San Francisco.

Japanese, who are likely to become excited if the trip is made without untoward event, should remember this. It may help them to believe that their great neighbor on this continent is not making a defiant gesture, but only proving that it is not impossible for the United States navy to utilize aviation to defend part of its Pacific possessions.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Diary: Up and donned my fur greatcoat and found in it an undelivered note for my wife to call up Eileen Rothacker at Hotel George V in Paris and, looking about, tore it into fine bits. And went down the elevator whistling a gay tune. To breakfast with Vash Young and much fine talk.

So walking along the avenue and saw a prick-me-dainty whose shoe uppers were salmon pink. Then back to my room to work a while and off to the Bruce Barton's tea and afterward Helen Young's to see her daughter Elizabeth, returned from her triumphs in the Hollywood studios.

In the evening W. W. Hawkins and Laura Cobb to a dinner of pheasants Lee Olwell sent. And later picking up lovely Doris Kenyon, of the cinema at the Chatham, and all to see Grantland Rice's daughter Florence in her hit play. To bed late reading Dan Henderson's autographed volume of his "The Crimson Queen."

At the Lamb's they were discussing why men who approached a large open fire invariably stood with backs to it. For a half hour they watched member after member approach and wheel into this position. Irvin Cobb offered this explanation. When Noah's ark sprung a leak a dog shoved his nose into the aperture until he could no longer withstand the cold. Then a woman held her hand over it with same result. Noah then sat on the opening until the chill became unbearable. And that Cobb offered, is why a dog's nose is always cold a woman's hand chilly and a man stands with back to the fire.

Arthur Jay Levy tells about the heating wagon breaking down in front of an insane asylum. Some of the inmates peering through the fence asked what the stuff was for. The driver told them it was to cover strawberries. Screamed one: "We put cream on our strawberries and yet they call us nuts."

Eddie Cantor is established again with his wife and family of girls in New York. They reside in an extra-sized penthouse on Central Park West in the 60's. And Cantor, someone tells me, has become a morning canterer (pun) along the bridge path. His days in Hollywood enslaved him to early rising. Before trekking the Santa Fe trail, he had not been the morning sun in 13 years. He breakfasted at 4 p.m.

Young Willie Vanderbilt, who met sudden death a couple of months ago in a motor smash, was among last of the juvenile spenders. While not spectacularly so, he was extravagant. His occasional Paris soirees often set him back $5,000 per a gigantic sum for over there. Although widely traveled, he loved New York and his anxiety to get here precipitated the tragedy. His long-loved companion was a distant kin, Eksine Gwynne, blue-eyed Paris play boy and columnist, with him at the finish.

Jimmy Sheldon, 23 years old, from Paducah, Ky., is newest sensation of the music publishing world. After rattling around for several years on a slim fare he suddenly accomplished his goal in one leap. In that swoop he wrote tunes for Beta in the Foibles, had new songs sung at the Algonquin supper club and Merry Go Round night club and artfully to write ditties for a musical. He is a grandson of the late Hal Corbett, believed by many to be the original of "Judge Priest". Although he wasn't.

Bagatelles: The late Ralph Barton's net estate was less than $2,000. But he saw more of life than many octogenarian millionaires. James J. Montague has written a poem a day for 29 years. Katherine Brush was born Katherine Louise Graham, Mrs. Donn-Byrne, who called himself last of the Irish story tellers, was born in New York city. In William Allen White's newspaper shop he was a letter from Mark Hanna: "This young man wants no office . . . this lady, the same man, is another of Brady's heavy coffee drinkers."

Bob Hayne is the son of a Methodist minister . . . Florence Ryerson is doing Marie Dresser's next screen story . . . Rob Wagner spends leisure in his garage making chests and cabinets.

PHILADELPHIA—The first honoree of a Pennsylvania school teacher was commemorated here by the Schoolmen's club with a pact and the unveiling of a bronze tablet to the memory of Enoch Flower. The first teacher's certificate ever issued in the state was granted to Flower, Dec. 26, 1683, by the Provincial Council of Philadelphia.

BOSTON—The statues of Boston's statesmen of the past have been among those benefited from the Civil Works program because they have been washed and cleaned. This project, favored by many of the citizens, furnished employment for nine men.

Facts About Digestive Troubles

NOT SO long ago a special meeting was held at the New York Academy of Medicine to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the publication of a book which made medical history. In 1833, Dr. William Beaumont, an army surgeon, gave to the world what he called, "Experiments and Observations on the Gastric Juices and Physiology of Digestion." This was an important contribution to human knowledge and paved the way for further investigations.

While stationed at Fort Mackinac, Mich., in 1820, his opportunity to make this study was presented in the person of a French-Canadian, Alexis St. Martin. This lad was wounded in the abdomen by the accidental discharge of a shotgun. As a result of the accident, St. Martin had a permanent opening into his stomach. Through this window Beaumont was able to study the action of the digestive juices. For several years these experiments and observations were continued.

Mechanism of Digestion

Prior to the printing of this valuable book, little was known concerning digestion. Today, all physicians are familiar with the intricate mechanism of digestion. It is a subject taught to first year medical students and this knowledge is regarded as essential to the proper understanding of many ailments.

I fear that most lay persons are more or less unaware of how the human stomach acts and how food is digested. In fact, there may be some doubt as to the exact location of this vital organ. When abdominal pain is present the sufferer often relates to the pain as "stomach-ache"; when, in reality, it may come from the appendix, intestines or bladder.

Such common complaints as heartburn, dyspepsia, acid or sour stomach, "biliousness" and nausea, are often attributed to stomach disorder. In many instances the disturbance may be traced to gall bladder disease, heart disease, infected tonsils, diseased nasal si-erly spoken of as "the great American complaint." It is no wonder that Americans are subject to digestive disturbances. Nothing else can be expected when we consider our hurried eating and living. Such rushing is a menace to good health and is seriously undermining to the health of the nation.

Everyone should take advantage of the discoveries of medical science. Ouh foreathers suffered from many disturbances that could not be cured because physicians of those days were not familiar with the disease and, of course, could not offer a cure. Today, medical science is able to combat most of those ailments. It offers the means to prevent them.

Three men were coming in from the hall. Patricia saw only one.

That one was Bill McGee.

Marthe turned. "Clark just said," she announced laughing. "Clark said that a bridge expert didn't need to meet a racketeer."

"I said no such thing!"

"Yes, you did, darling."

"I didn't."

The two in the front seat wrangled all the way to the club. Julian had not minded, he had, in fact been rather flattered. But Patricia knew that Marthe was trying to stir up trouble between the two men.

The Sky High club was on a mean, quiet little street, given over in daytime to business. The building was formidable, a ten-story loft building dark now. A man who had been strolling up and down the sidewalk came up alertly as their car stopped. Clark showed his card. A door was unlocked. The five streamed into a dimly lighted, bare, uncarpeted hall.

"I'm thrilled," whispered Marthe.

Isn't it thrilling?"

They were lifted to the roof in a freight elevator. Marthe liked that too. Clark and Phil were frankly uncomfortable. Julian was curious. He admired this approach, rather. Good stuff for people who lived on Park avenue. It made them feel that they were slumming. They reached the roof. Julian was not surprised by the club. The others were. The club was all that its name had indicated. Sky High. It was luxurious, it was smart, it was modern, it was done in silver gray. There was a gleaming onyx bar. It was just another night club. "Well," said Marthe, disappointed. "Is this it?"

"What did you expect?" inquired Clark, not quite pleasantly. "Machine guns at the door?"

"Just for that I'll dance first with Julian."

"You would have anyhow," Clark said in a voice pitched for her ears alone. Marthe pretended not to hear. She linked her arm defiantly through Julian's, strolled with him to a pocket handkerchief floor where three other couples were revolving slowly.

That left Patricia with Clark and Phil. The two men looked at each other. Phil sighed and took a seat at the bar. Patricia stepped into Clark's embrace and drifted into a world of pure enchantment. She forgot her worries, her anxieties, her reasons for coming here, her reasons for desiring not to come.

Let the future take care of itself while she waltzed with Clark!

"There are tables outside," he said, looking down into her flushed and beautiful face. "Why don't we go outside?"

"Don't you like this?"

"I never see you alone," he said. "I can't bear his breath he said. "Can't I ever see you alone?"

The music sobbed to a close and they started for a door that led to the cool of the roof. Three men were coming from the hall; three men were dropping their hats and coats; three men were preparing to stop at the bar.

Patricia saw only one. That one was Bill McGee.

Patricia felt the pulses roaring in her ears. She thought for a moment that she would faint, that she must faint. She leaned against Clark's whole body suddenly stricken. Had Bill seen her? Or hadn't he seen her? He was saving his hat to the check-girl. He would turn in a moment. He would see her then!

She darted through the open door to the roof. Clark, bewildered, followed swiftly. What was wrong? What had happened? The girl had backed against the edge of the roof, her eyes terrified in an ashen face. Just a minute before she had been smiling, delighting him with her safety. He could not understand.

"What is it?" asked Clark aloud.

"There's a man inside," she stammered in a voice that rang with

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE

With the others she went out to the car. She felt queer, not herself. Clark was driving. He and Marthe had the front seat. Julian and Phil were with Patricia in the back. Patricia listened to Phil's naive exposition of the Sky High club, nodded occasionally, spoke when it was her turn. The club was supposed to be owned by a gangster, so Phil said; it was constantly under police supervision, but somehow kept on running.

"It's my personal belief that all the gangsters have gone on the stage," said Haverholt, grinning.

"I'd like to meet a dyed-in-the-wool racketeer just once. What's that, Clark?" he called, for the man in the front seat had muttered something.

Marthe turned. "Clark just said," she announced laughing. "Clark said that a bridge expert didn't need to meet a racketeer."

"I said no such thing!"

"Yes, you did, darling."

"I didn't."

The two in the front seat wrangled all the way to the club. Julian had not minded, he had, in fact been rather flattered. But Patricia knew that Marthe was trying to stir up trouble between the two men.

The Sky High club was on a mean, quiet little street, given over in daytime to business. The building was formidable, a ten-story loft building dark now. A man who had been strolling up and down the sidewalk came up alertly as their car stopped. Clark showed his card. A door was unlocked. The five streamed into a dimly lighted, bare, uncarpeted hall.

"I'm thrilled," whispered Marthe.

Isn't it thrilling?"

Quakers Defeat Youngstown Chaney for Fifth Straight Win

SCIENCEVILLE TRIMS EAST LIVERPOOL--DOVER AND NILES TRIUMPH

INVADERS FIGHT HARD IN CLOSE, 30-22 ENCOUNTER

Salem Leads for Entire Contest But Fails to Click Impressively

Failing to perform as impressively as in past contests but nevertheless asserting their superiority in all departments of play, Salem High basketeers defeated Youngstown Chaney, 30-22, in a close battle here Saturday night.

Fifth Straight for Salem

It was the fifth consecutive triumph for the Quaker aggregation which started slowly, held a slight lead in opening periods of play then flashed a powerful last-quarter offensive that left the invaders far behind.

Coach Ches McPhee's passers put up what their coach admitted was the best game the team has played all season. The invaders battled hard all the way with Metro Senchysak, star forward, celebrating his return to the Chaney lineup by leading the scoring with eight points.

Senchysak started the scoring in the game as he tossed the sphere through the hoop from long range but Lawrence Kaercher evened the count as he took a pass from Wayne Sidinger to score an easy under-basket shot. Lieberman's free throw put Chaney ahead but Ben Cope tossed in two points via the same route to put Salem in front.

Score Again Tied

Sidinger's short shot added two more points to Salem's total but Senchysak tallied a fielder and Lieberman another foul and the score was again knotted. Charlie McCloskey dribbled through the entire team for a great scoring play and a second later Earl Zelle, who had replaced Kaercher at forward, duplicated his feat to put Salem in front, 10-6, at the quarter.

Baskets by Ash and Lieberman brought Chaney to a tie with Herbert Brown's cagers as Salem appeared unable to get going. Cope registered a pair of free throws but Terlecki, taking the ball away from Sidinger, dribbled the entire length of the floor for one of the game's finest plays and put Chaney back in the running.

Pukalski scored from long range but Senchysak got those points back with two foul shots. Pukalski's second field goal put Salem in front by a three-point margin, 17-14, as the half closed.

Chaney Counts Free Throws

Chaney's accuracy from the foul-line again brought the team right on the Quaker's heels as Terlecki and Ash tallied free throws but Sidinger and Cope each registered from action for Salem's only points of the third period. Neither team was able to do a thing, offensively, for the remainder of the quarter and a foul toss by Patterson, which made the score 21-17, Salem still leading, ended the period.

The Quakers, flashing their first really powerful basket-making attack, started early in the final period to assert, for the first time, their real supremacy over the invaders.

Zelle tossed in two field goals and Pukalski zoomed the hoop through for a beautiful basket from near the center-line. Pukalski also scored a free throw and Salem was in front 28 to 17, before Yukas, replacement for Terlecki, finally counted for the visitors.

Senchysak registered a long shot and Patterson a foul but the Quakers were too far in front and, with two minutes of play left, Coach Brown began inserting his reserve talent with diminutive Jackie Mullins drawing cheers from the audience as he dribbled down the court to score Salem's final basket.

Good Draft Horses Becoming Scarce

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Jan. 8.—If anyone is keeping a span of good draft horses around the house, he's sitting on a small fortune.

That's the conclusion reached by James A. Hughes, a dairy superintendent, after a careful survey of the draft horse field. For weeks he looked for the breed, and he found exactly two.

The trouble is, he opined today, that breweries and distilleries are out to collect fine teams for their business. A truck is a truck, but a horse as an advertising medium is something else. Whoever heard of anyone turning around to look twice at a truck? argued Hughes.

The scarcity of draft horses—indeed partly, perhaps, by the fact that farmers stopped breeding them a few years ago as the truck displaced the horse—has shot up the price of a span to around $700, said Hughes.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 8.—Jacob Newman, whose family said he was 103 years old, was buried yesterday.

Political Rivalry Forgotten

Mayor LaGuardia

Joseph McKee

Election battles seem to have been relegated to the dim and distant past in this friendly scene between Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia and Joseph V. McKee, one of his opponents in New York's Mayoralty race. They were pictured when McKee made a congratulatory call at City Hall.
